Both the Journal and Telegram of Portland last night contained glowing accounts of yesterday's reception, written up by staff correspondents who accompanied the senatorial train down from Portland. The situation was well expressed when the Telegram in its opening sentence said that "Astoria was bursting with enthusiasm."

Owing to increased business the Reliance Electrical works has removed to more commodious quarters at 429-23 Bond street, where they will be pleased to meet all their old customers, as well as new ones. They are now prepared to do all kinds of electrical repairing with neatness and dispatch, and with their specially designed dynamo can recharge storage batteries in first-class manner.

Death visited the home of J. N. Jorgenson Saturday night when his little 5 year old son died of scarlet fever. The funeral was a private one and was held yesterday morning from the family residence in East Astoria. The presence of scarlet fever in the home was due to other members of the family having formerly been afflicted with it and it is in no manner attributed to a cropping up of the disease.

Senator Fulton's haste in reaching Washington is occasioned by receipt of an urgent dispatch from Senator Mitchell, in which Mr. Fulton's presence at the national capital is requested immediately. Senator Fulton does not know the exact significance of the message. He will leave Wednesday and take his oath at once. Immediately thereafter he will return to the city and remain here until December, when he assumes his seat.

A remarkable lapse from the gulf fixed between the white and colored races of the south is noted in a dispatch from Spokane which tells of a negro and his white wife passing through that city, both having been residents of Alabama. The woman is the daughter of a rich planter of that state. The father has sworn that he will kill them both and is now on their trail. The couple were recently married in Los Angeles, whither they eloped.

W. F. Wallingford, a venerable resident of Warrenton, died at his home Sunday forenoon of paralysis. Mr. Wallingford had suffered long and for months preceding the final relapse had been perfectly helpless, his affliction having affected every part of his body.

The funeral will be held today from the family residence, with interment in Ocean View cemetery. Deceased is survived by a widow, two sons and a little daughter, all residents of Warrenton. The family formerly lived in Forest Grove.

M. B. Bosorth, who has been in the city for the past two days visiting with his family, left last night for Portland to attend a meeting of the stockholders of the Wolf Creek Mining and Development company, of which he is manager. Mr. Bosorth is very optimistic at the outlook of his mining properties and speaks a profitable season of work in the near future. An abundance of water is near at hand and the ledge shows every indication of repaying those interested to even a greater extent than at first anticipated.

Warrenton is leader in a mackerel hunt at present, but the citizens there are still looking forward to better times. The boom is a long time spent, but it is hoped over there that another one is coming and that this time it will stay. The mill is not running and has not for some time past, but the cessation of the operation of cutting lumber is due to rotors being made to the works. Logs are now being floated down from Cullity lake and a raft is being formed immediately below the bridge across Skipanon creek which will be floated away as soon as it is completed. The proper thing to do, so say the residents, is to have a mill at Warrenton of sufficient capacity to handle all the logs which might float down the creek and never let them get outside until they are converted into lumber. This would be admirable, of course, but the capitalists seem at present to hold other views, at least there is no visible move to consummate the much desired scheme.

Governor Chamberlain will attend the opening of the Grange Institute in A. O. U. W. hall, March 10, if it does not conflict with pressing official duties, says the Oregonian. In answer to an invitation to attend and address the farmers at the opening of the institute, Governor Chamberlain writes: "I am in receipt of your very courteous letter of the 17th inst., asking me to be present at the opening of the Grange Institute on the 10 prox. at A. O. U. W. hall. I do not know whether it will be possible for me to be with you, but if my official engagements are such that I can do so, I will take great pleasure in accepting your kind invitation." The committee, with Master B. K. Leedy as chairman, is at work on the program. Assurances are given that it will be full of good things. But the chief interest centers in the presence of National Master Aaron Jones, who will arrive in Portland March 9. He will deliver two addresses during the two days' institute. That is, he is down for two addresses, but he will not doubt take part in all the discussions that usually follow the leading papers. Strangers are pleased with the prospects of his visit to this state and Washington, and will largely attend all the meetings which he addresses.

One of the passengers on board the steamer America committed suicide by leaping overboard just as the steamer was nearing Portland Sunday night. The suicide was H. Bleikenrifer, 21 years of age and had resided in St. Helens. He was intoxicated at the time he boarded the steamer at St. Helens, and it was with difficulty that the crew several times prevented him from taking his life previous to his successful attempt. Shortly before the steamer reached Linnton he became submersive and it was thought that he would give no more trouble. On being left alone for a moment, however, he made his way to the upper deck. As Linnton was passed some ladies in the cabin heard a loud splash astern of the boat, and it is generally supposed that it was at this place the unfortunate fellow took his life.

Two utterly absurd stories have been going the rounds during the past few days, and yesterday The Astorian took occasion to run them down. One was to the effect that Senator Fulton would remove his residence to Portland. While it was felt by the representative who interviewed the senator about the matter that mention of the subject was almost an insult, it was his belief that the story should be vigorously denied. Senator Fulton laughed heartily at the foolish report, and assured the reporter that he had not the remotest idea of living anywhere else than at Astoria. "I leave this city," he exclaimed. "Well, Astoria shall always be my home, for there is no other place on earth so dear to me." The second absurdity concerned the future course of another prominent man. It was to the effect that Hon. John Hahn would be the republican nominee for state senator to succeed Fulton. "No, that's a mistake," said Mr. Hahn, when an Astorian man asked him about it. "Tell those story-tellers not to be foolish."

The Alsternix is in her own again, the vessel having been successfully floated into deep water on the high tide Sunday night. She is now anchored in the lower harbor where she floats on an even keel, unhampered and stately. The big German bark became stranded late on the night of Monday, the 8th of this month, during a heavy blow. Arrangements were immediately made for getting her off the sands and no effort was spared for carrying the plans into execution. Huge anchors were placed out and cables were run from these to two powerful engines on board. There cables as fast as they slackened were at once made taut. The vessel had recently moved a considerable distance nearer deep water and those in charge were positive that all that was necessary was a high tide to successfully float her. The high tide came on scheduled time and today the bark is again in her natural element. She is practically uninjured. Her bottom is slightly strained, admitting a little water, but it is expected that this defect will be speedily remedied.

Yesterday was the 24th anniversary of the arrival at Astoria of Captain Charles Richardson of the lighthouse tender Columbine. In 1879 Captain Richardson came out from the east as second officer of the Manzanita, which took up her station at San Francisco. In 1879 he was promoted to first officer of the old Shubrick, and on February 23 the ship reached Astoria and took anchorage opposite the Flavel wharf. Since that time Captain Richardson has been a resident of Astoria. He has more friends among newspaper writers of the northwest, perhaps, than any other commander. A newspaper man is always welcomed heartily by Captain Richardson, and the meaneast reporter is treated with as much consideration as the greatest editor. The captain is thoroughly imbued with the idea that the newspapers are the agents of the masses, and that a kindly act toward a struggling writer is an indirect convenience to the public. It should not be understood from this that Captain Richardson does not appear as genial to all other persons, for he is the soul of goodwill.

Little Constantine Balsam, known as "Connie the Flower Boy," had the distinction of being the first Astorian to greet Senator Fulton upon his arrival in the city yesterday. Connie had thoughtfully prepared a beautiful lily to present to the senator and was on hand early to obtain a vantage point at the depot. He eagerly watched the approach of the train and as it drew up in the yard amid the cheers of the people and the blasts of innumerable whistles, stationed himself by the step of the senatorial car. Owing to his diminutive stature there was great danger of the lad and his beautiful offering being lost sight of in the great mass of humanity crowding about him, so a gentleman standing near lifted him aloft on his shoulder. Connie held the lily high in his hand and it was easily discernible by hundreds of people. When Senator Fulton emerged from the car he stopped for a moment on the platform and bowed to the multitude. His next act was to step partially down and take the lily with smiles and thanks from the hands of the happy child who held it out to him. Senator Fulton carried the lily with him to the Occident where the addresses were delivered and it figured prominently throughout the reception during the day. The incident was charming as anything that occurred during the entire proceedings and it is doubtful if any event or eloquent eulogy were more appreciated.

BRITISH CRUISER A RECORD BREAKER

The navy armed cruiser recently built for the British government is a record breaker, having developed the fastest speed of any vessel in their navy. In medicine, however, we have the record breaker in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Introduced over 50 years ago it has forged ahead until today finds it occupying the foremost position as a family remedy, and is used largely to the exclusion of all others. Don't fail to try a bottle, especially if you are weak and run down or suffer from poor appetite, heartburn, belching, nausea, headache, indigestion, dyspepsia or constipation. It cannot help but do you good, and if taken regularly will surely restore you to perfect health. The genuine must have our private stamp over the neck of the bottle. Refuse all imitations.
